

Claim to be paid into an overseas bank account

Application for payment of old or damaged currency

This form must be completed by people returning old or damaged currency they want paid into an overseas bank account.

The Reserve Bank only pays face value and doesn't offer advice on the value of currency as collectable items. Contact a numismatic dealer if you think the currency may be worth more than face value.

The Reserve Bank does not accept foreign currency.

The Reserve Bank will count your claim and payment will be based on this count. In the event that the count significantly differs from your claim amount below, we will contact you using the contact details you have provided on this form.

Payment must be made to you by deposit to a bank account.

Our trading bank's overseas transaction fees totalling NZD20.00 will be deducted before payment. If your claim totals NZD20.00 or less it will not be paid to you. Note that your bank and/or overseas correspondent banks may also levy a fee before paying the net proceeds to your account.

You can send currency to our office in Wellington via courier, but we urge you to first check the terms of carriage with the courier company you use.

You may wish to donate your claim to charity, particularly if it totals NZD20.00 or less. If so, please indicate which charity you would like to support:

I choose to donate my claim to New Zealand Red Cross (international work) - www.redcross.org.nz

I choose to donate my claim to UNICEF New Zealand (international work) - www.unicef.org.nz
